A family of cats is waiting for their new baby kitten to join them, but unfortunately that time never comes. After a period of grief, where they experience difficult emotions and thoughts, Kitty and Oscar are able to overcome their loss and learn that in our hearts we can always keep close to us the memory of someone who has left us.When a baby is stillborn or dies soon after birth, the experience is so painful to be often unthinkable and unspeakable. In most cases, friends and relatives do not know what to say, and almost no one finds suitable words. This feeling is even stronger when talking with children. The shared reading of this story can be a tool for families to reflect on death without fear and without lies, and can give adults and children the opportunity to freely express their thoughts and emotions.

The objective of this series is to teach professionals, students and amateurs how to create and develop new characters with a wide choice of style that will be free to use when finished. Each title develops one theme at a time and this second volume is

From medieval manuscript to Japanese prints, from Steinlen's splendid drawings to 17th century prints, the author introduces the reader to the hundreds of books and manuscripts (belonging to the Bibliotheque Nationale de France in Paris) in which the lovely feline is represented. The cat has been the main character of many tales, but also the inhabitant of the most diverse books: from natural histories to household manuals, from medieval prayer books to famous writers' manuscripts. A wonderful selection for all who love cats and books!"
