There was a missing "something" that had a negative impact in ways I hadn't fully realized. Sixteen years ago, God called us to Asia to equip Christians in using apologetics in evangelism. While we lived in Singapore for seven years, I had the privilege of teaching in four seminaries, and in 1/3 of all the protestant churches in Singapore alone, as well as diverse churches throughout Asia.

When we say "something is missing in my life" - it can also mean people who encourage us and bring out the best in our journey. This doesn't mean I want to surround myself with yes-men (or yes-women) or people who will never challenge my point of view.

George and Corina Costas have made the perfect life for themselves - the house, the pool, the social standing, and the daughter they have such high hopes for. Yet when twenty-something Lilly Costas fails to buy into the life they have so carefully mapped out for her, she sends shockwaves through the family. By leaving the family nest and setting off for foreign lands, Lilly triggers a series of events that shake the family to its core. With the façade of a perfect life shattered, mother, father and daughter are each compelled to confront deep discontent in their own ways. This sets them all on a path of discovery and reinvention. But is it too late for these disparate family members to ever come together again as a functioning family unit? Stretching from the modern West to the rural East, George, Corina, and Lilly must, in their own ways, acknowledge the painful inadequacies of their lives while daring to step into a new and unfamiliar world.

"The story of an obsessive-compulsive housebreaker whose every waking moment is jam-packed with finicky clockwork ritual--the kind of intense micro-planning that might have made even Napoleon back off...Matthew Dicks has created an unforgettable character that will have you torn between wanting to throttle him--or adopt him." --Alan Bradley, author of the New York Times bestselling Flavia de Luce novels A career criminal with OCD tendencies and a savant-like genius for bringing order to his crime scenes, Martin considers himself one of the best. After all, he's been able to steal from the same people for years on end--virtually undetected. Of course, this could also be because of his unique business model--taking only items that will go unnoticed by the homeowner. After all, who would notice a missing roll of toilet paper here, a half-used bottle of maple syrup there, or even a rarely used piece of china buried deep within a dusty cabinet? Even though he's never met these homeowners, spending hours in their houses, looking through their photo albums and reading their journals, he feels like he knows them. So Martin decides to meddle more in their lives--playing the part of a rather odd guardian angel--even though it means breaking many of his neurotic rules. In this hilarious, suspenseful and often profound novel about a man used to planning every second of his life, Martin comes to realize that life is much better lived on the edge (at least some of the time).

A career criminal with OCD tendencies and a savant-like genius for bringing order to his crime scenes, Martin considers himself one of the best in the business. Of course, he only takes items that will go unnoticed by the homeowners. Even though he hasn Zdravka is a young hot-headed Scorpio always ready to make sudden decisions. Due to this her decisions are often wrong. After a broken engagement she practically leaves overnight her promising career and homeland to study in Germany. She later continues working in Germany, where she meets a charming compatriot, very attentive and loving and she believes she found a partner for life. They marry and soon after on her husband's initiative they migrate to Australia. In spite of being badly neglected by her husband, whose personality changed in a matter of months after the marriage, she plays deaf and blind and sticks to him through thick and thin. She finds herself in a new country with unwelcoming locals, experiences isolation, betrayal, humiliation and racism - all without sympathy, understanding and protection of a man she is emotionally involved with. One day, and after almost fifteen years of a bad relationship, Zdravka finally woke up.

Family (FatherandMotherILoveYou!) There are large families, little families, and blended families. The one ingredient that makes a family successful is love. Power struggles - Lack of communication - Unconscious needs - Fear of rejection - Different interests - Out of date habits - Fear of intimacy - High expectations - Too busy. If even one of these issues causes problems in your relationships, then this book is for you. As Britain's top personal development guru - and married himself - Ben Renshaw is able to throw strong light on what we can all do to improve our relationships, no matter what the problem. In his view there are ten principles of a successful partnership or marriage: Letting go of the past. Knowing what you want to say 'Yes' to. Realising that Now is New. Deciding how you want to be. Fearing less, talking more. Sexual healing. The inevitability of change. Living a life of gratitude. Making love more important than the relationship. Remembering the spirit zone. Full of thoughtful, realistic advice, this is the book no caring, sharing person can afford not to read.

Missing Something? takes on some of the most pressing scientific issues facing society and challenges readers to think about them in new and unexpected ways. Drawing on his seventy-six years of experience—much of it spent working as an engineering manager without a college degree at top companies—Johnny Doubter lives up to his name by asking tough questions, such as: Can a moment stretch in time or maybe last forever as a valued memory? Just what is a moment anyway? How can electronic equipment, with all of the voltage dependent devices, tolerate an overall static voltage charge without affecting operation? Will we ever completely explain how a hundred or so atom types have linked together in various ways creating millions of lifeforms with different abilities? What are the consequences of global warming? We're natural investigators, but we have been foolishly convinced that our job is to digest whatever the "experts" provide. We have a right and responsibility to awaken that sleepy organ snoozing in our heads. Challenge what you've been taught with the fascinating questions, analysis, and insights in this book.

The more time I spend with him, the more I fall in love with him. One day when Charlotte was in charge of her friend's mansion, she discovered an egg thief. But the man's face was familiar: Paul Sarizen, her friend's nephew! He was a newspaper reporter, traveling the world, and suddenly he was back. When my friend fell ill, I sent him so many letters, but he never answered. Charlotte's first impression of him was terrible. And yet, he ended up living in Charlotte's house as a lodger. But when her friend said that Paul is the perfect man for her, she became conscious of him...

This book is aimed at anyone interested in improving and enhancing their quality of life. So often our greatest motivator is to be 'successful' - and we strive mightily to achieve a long list of things - a good job title, a car, a house, a relationship etc. - only to feel disillusioned and empty once we've got them. Ben Renshaw shows how true fulfillment comes from finding a healthy balance between the spheres of mind, body and soul. He explains: *the principles of happiness *the confidence need not be a problem *the art of relationships *how to make you 'vocation your vacation' *that developing a sense of humour is essential With a refreshing honesty - and a thoroughly fresh approach - Ben Renshaw offers many practical solutions, much wisdom and many answers to the questions which most of us ask about our hurried, stressful often baffling lives today.
