At the dawn of the Roman imperial period, a new artistic programme was sought, and 'all Greek styles, archaic, classical, and Hellenistic were combined to create a new Roman art' (M. Bieber, Sculpture of the Hellenistic Age, New York, 1981, p. 182). The emergent style reflected Roman admiration of Greek artistic achievements, yet this cultural appropriation also demonstrated Rome's supplanting of Greece as the dominant political and cultural force in the Mediterranean.

This realistic down-to-earth Roman style is in vivid contrast to Hellenistic art which illustrated military achievements with mythological imagery. Paradoxically, one reason for the ultimate fall of Rome was because it became too attached to the propagandist value of its art, and squandered huge resources on grandiose building projects purely to impress the people.

The archaistic style that will be discussed will be referred to as Roman archaism. This style is based on that of the archaic period of ancient Greece, which is considered by modern art historians to have lasted from 800-480 BCR. The naming of this period is based on the Greek word ????, "arche," meaning origin or beginning.
